There have been many improvements and updates to the program since its initial release. Among the main differences from its successor Chessmaster 6, the most noticeable one is that Vitruvius is not a part of the worldwide Championship Software Association which has resulted in the lack of official rating. The current version, Vitruvius Chess engine 1.11, was released in April 2007 and is the result of NewLife Software's efforts and funding from the US Chess Federation. It uses a random starting position generator, which means that the opening book and game opening book positions are randomly generated to give a wide variety of starting positions." "A new version is released every year, and the numbering scheme increases by 100. Thus, the most recent version is 1.99.0, and the previous version was 1.11.0. For example, 1.11.0 was released in April 2007 and 1.11.1 in May 2007, so 1.11.2 was released in June 2008. For version 1.11.0, the company was born, NewLife Software, whose first version was released on March 29, 2005. The company also hosts an official website, where you can find the history of the program and documentation about the various versions.
