gamesQ: How to bind a button created dynamically to a $scope's variable in Angularjs I have created a button using ng-repeat in my view: { {item.name} } Show popup I have this JavaScript code var myApp =

angular.module('myApp', []);
myApp.controller('myController', ['$scope', '$rootScope', function($scope, $rootScope) { $scope.items = [{ name: "5" }, { name: "6" }, { name: "7" }]; $scope.showPopup = function() { console.log('I am inside showPopup function in my controller'); }; }]);

The question is how do I bind the button to `$scope.showPopup` function? What is the correct way of handling this situation? A: just invoke the function `$scope.showPopup()` using the ng-click attribute of your button. Show popup Yesterday, evidence of a “very serious and disturbing development” (as the Guardian put it) emerged that the Islamist terror organization Hamas is now militarily active inside Israel.

Specifically, the military wing of Hamas, the Izz ad-Din al-Qassam Brigades, is now operating in the north of the country and has taken responsibility for
